BLACK GIRLS LIVE IN FEAR WHEN THEY GO TO BIG CITY

FEAR!

The Black girl in the big city learns quickly that terror has nothing to do with color, interests, friends or almost anything else normal. Terror is a lonely companion ----but one that finds a victim and makes life a living hell. And the terror facing a girl alone in an American city has already found Irene Jacobs.

At 4 a.m. it is still too dark to see anything in this tiny third floor apartment in Washington's overpriced Georgetown. But Irene Jacobs, the girl who lives alone here, is suddenly and completely awake.

"I knew there was a man standing beside my bed," she says in a dead voice. "I don't know how I knew it. But I knew he was there and he was going to attack me."

With one silent motion he reached out of the darkness and ripped the covers off her, starting a grim adventure in her life that is still far from finished.

"Nothing seemed real," she remembers of that moment 18 months ago. "The bedroom seemed a million miles long—or not even there at all."

"He grabbed me and pulled me bolt upright and pushed me out into the living room. It was as though I had never been in that room before."

He kept talking the whole time. First he said he was a dope addict and needed money to buy a fix. But when she found her purse and gave him the $14 in it, he said never mind, he had really come for her.

"There was a strange, disoriented softness in his voice," Irene says. "It gave an unearthly scope to my terror. The unbelievably odd things you remember at a time like this."

"For a moment I caught a brilliant glimpse of the dancing class I had attended when I was a child. How shy and uncomfortable the boys were. How you had to put them at ease. . ."

She heard herself saying in a clam, steady voice:

"You know, when I do things I'm sorry for, it's usually because I'm afraid or angry. A kind of sickness comes over me when I'm disappointed in myself or in something that's happened to me. I lost control of my actions."

"You must feel rotten to want to do this. You don't even know me. Let's have a cigarette and talk."

Miraculously, she had tuned in to his wave length. He took a cigarette and told her about his failure as a husband, his wife's hatred of him, his never making good, his lying and stealing.

"The worse I feel," he snarled finally, "the worse I act. And I feel lousy."

He looked at her in brightening dawn light, put out his cigarette, picked up a pair of her stockings drying on a rack and tied her feet and hands. Then he fled.

She worked herself loose in minutes and called the police. But by the time they arrived he had vanished. She couldn't find his picture in their files. All she was left with was one clue to his identity—he had let himself into her apartment with a key.

She had, a few weeks before, left her key with neighbors so that the man who waxed their floors could wax hers. The trail led to the floor-pacing company but they had hired the man—George—through an employment service, and that agency was forbidden by law to give any information to the police, no matter what the case.

The same ruling applied at the Veteran's Administration. And that's how the day after the night ended—in a carefully built blind alley. When she got home, the telephone was ringing.

"I knew who it was as soon as I picked up the phone," she said. "George was calling to apologize. He said he had tried to find the courage to turn himself in. Now, he wanted to know, would I find a doctor to help him. He said he'd call back."

She called the police and together they set a trap. But George didn't call back. By the end of the week, after the police learned he had a 20-year record in several states, they concluded he had probably skipped town.

Then the phone rang again. It was the second in a long series of calls George was to make, asking forgiveness. But it was impossible to trace the calls, first because it required legal clearance and then, when it was finally permitted, because a new detective on the case was afraid to interfere.

"I was beside myself," Irene says. "The man was there—just out of reach. I had to keep the conversations going. I was his prisoner just as surely as though he were still in my apartment."

"And then, one night, he ran out of nickels in the phone booth. He must have known it meant caputre, but he gave me his number to call him back, I called the police first."

"You'd think that would have wrapped it up."

But Irene's ordeal wasn't over then, and it isn't over now.

After his full confession, Irene heard a judge in felony court place $15,000 bail on him. Luckily no one put up the money.

After arraignment he was sent for psychiatric observation and judged legally sane despite the controlled, clinical atmosphere with no temptations before him and his own admission that he was "sick."

And then, finally, the prosecutor's office reduced the charges against him to simple burglary in order to get him to plead guilty and do away with a trial and the chance of having him acquitted of the real crime.

"Instead of a maximum 20-year sentence," Irene says, "he got a six-year term. That meant he would be eligible for parole in 18 months."

"He's written to me from jail. He says he's sorry everything happened and he says he'll see me to make it right when he gets out."

"I'm afraid of the dark now. I've had the lock changed, but I'm afraid of opening my apartment door. I'm afraid of everything."

"And last week the parole board called to tell me that he's up for review but not to worry—because they'll let me know before they let him out."

THERE ARE NO SAFE NIGHTS

A NUMBERS GAME HIT CAN BREAK A COUNTRY

A fabulous legal numbers game threatens to almost bankrupt an entire nation, take the very food of existence away from millions and make an already wealthy few, rich beyond their wildest dreams.

The numbers game is getting $15 million worth of bets every week and if the number 67 hits before laws limiting the size of bets are passed, the Italian government will be forced to pay out more than $135 million.

The national numbers game has been a bit thing in Italy for almost 400 years and at one time financed the cost of the entire Italian army.

The system is simple. Every Saturday five numbers from one to ninety are drawn from urns in ten major cities. Gamblers place their bets on either a single number or a combination.

Minimum stake for a single bet is 50 cents, maximum $42,000. But there is no restriction on the number of bets one person can place.

The small-time gamblers were no threat to the Italian treasury, which paid out in winnings about 43 per cent of what it took in. Another 40 per cent went on expenses, leaving a profit margin of 17 per cent.

But over the past two years wealthy syndicates have gone into business, playing a system mathematically calculated to break the bank.

They wait till a number has "delayed" for at least 100 weeks in any one city, then to town with their bets. Anything up to $40,000 a time is splashed on the overdue number which has a strong probability of coming up.

The state offers fixed bets, regardless of its takings. Month by month the winnings are catching up on the amount received by the Finance Ministry.

Now number 67 has been hanging on for 128 weeks in the city of Cagliari. Between $12 million and $15 million is placed on it each week but the State will have to pay out ten times that amount when it finally appears.

The syndicates can afford the colossal outlay. But "67 fever" has caught on among all gamblers, rich or poor. Old women light candles in Church to invoke 67.

Money-lenders are doing a roaring trade providing more cash to feed to it. And appeals have gone out to workers not to waste their life savings on the elusive number.

Government is rushing through a law to restrict bets and winnings. It is a race against chance.

For although mathematically there is no reason for 67 to come up in Cagliari for another year, millions will try again.

COPS HEAR 'KILL OR CASTRATE' ORDER AND ARREST MAD HUSBAND

A pair of fast-dollar operators took $1,000 to kill a man, fumbled the job and then were sent back with orders to "at least castrate him."

The amazing tale of the murder for money try that couldn't even be turned into a successful job of cutting out the intended victim's sex organs was told in court after a successful phone tapping job located the criminals for police.

The telephone tap material was never admitted as court evidence but without it the police would not have been able to trace the trigger men and get a confession.

Cast of the bizarre case were Paul Davies, 30, his wife, and James Knight, the wife's employer.

Testimony in the case started when prosecutor told how two men attacked Knight in his home.

"One was armed with a meat cleaver and with it inflicted dreadful injuries. He half-severed his left ear," Hough said.

"The two men escaped and have not been traced."

There had been earlier trouble between Davies and Knight, who employed the wife as his housekeeper.

After the attack on Knight, police set up recording and listening equipment on his telephone because a call from Davies was expected.

Later an hour's conversation was recorded.

In the recording, it was alleged, Davies said he had men watching Knight's home and he had paid them money.

"For more these men were apparently prepared to murder," said Hough.

"Then Davies changed his mind and decided he wanted Knight castrated."

When arrested, Davies was alleged to have told the police: "I am glad you caught me for if it had gone on any longer I would have shot him."

Hough said there were taped references to Davies going to see Knight with a gun.

Davies, it was alleged, told policeman Michael Reedy that he gave two men $100 each and Knight's address.

He said he met them in a bar and told them his troubles.

"In the telephone conversations he says $1,000. In his statement he says $100 each," observed Hough. "One will probably never know how much the men were paid."

Knight told the court that ever since he employed Mrs. Davies her mate had been jealous and there was trouble between them over her.

About 8:45 one evening, he said, he was sitting in the living room of his home when the door bell rang. Mrs. Davies answered it.

He went to see where she was.

"Then," said Knight, "I sensed there was someone behind me, I half turned and saw a man standing with his arm raised above his head."

He felt a blow on the back of his neck and fell on his knees. The man hit him again and he took it on the left shoulder.

He tried to grab the weapon the man was using.

"It was a butcher's cleaver. The blade was probably 15 inches long," said Knight.

"I heard someone say, 'Let him have it, Chris,' and I saw another man coming in the door. I got hit across my ear."

Then the two men ran away and he telephoned for the police and an ambulance.

He could only describe one of the men.

"He was about 27, about 5 ft. 6 in., with dark, bushy hair, said Knight. "He had a black overcoat."

About a week later recording equipment was attached to his telephone and at 11:30 p.m. Davies called him.

Knight said Davies tried to persuade him to arrange a meeting for him with his wife.

"He offered to give his wife money and to give me the money to compensate for the injuries I'd received," Knight went on. "He said he arranged and paid $1,000 to have me murdered."

"Then he said the night before the job should have been done he got cold feet and asked them to prevent me from having sexual intercourse ever again."

"He said two men in a truck had been watching the house all week and a doctor had been brought in to do the operation."

WIFE IGNORES BIG FUSS

EX-CON RAN DOPE RACKET DURING HIS STAY IN JAIL

A former prisoner's claim that he operated a drug racket in one of the country's largest jails has sparked investigations around the nation.

The prisoner's story was told in a written confession mailed to police in a state law enforcement agency but the exact jail involved cannot be named because investigations are underway there to catch other dope peddlers believed to be still operating.

The statement given to police reveals that the ex-convict sold the drugs for almost two years before he was released.

Now working as a cab driver, he also is an active organizer for the Black Nationalists in Chicago.

The drugs sold included compounds made from sedatives, sleeping pills and other narcotic preparations not normally used for drug kicks. The compounds were so effective that many users stayed high for weeks on end and even became addicts while in jail.

The importance of the ex-convict's story has added significance because of the increasing prison riot problem in which many of the rioters are cons riding high on dope. This fact has been reported over and over following riots, including the violent outbreaks in Ohio and New York recently.

The size of the dope operation and the fact that prison authorities knew what was happening is starkly demonstrated by the fact that the prisoner was housed in a carpeted and comfortably furnished cell with a television and stereo combination and received special food purchased outside a jail.

Here are the highlights of the drug selling story as told by the ex-con:

"I was in for the seventh time and my sentence this trip was for five years. I started out in the carpenter shop but because my health was bad they assigned me to the hospital and that's where my cell was too.

"At first I worked in the storeroom but then they transferred me to the pharmacy where I was supposed to keep the place clean. After I was there for awhile, they let me hand out the drugs and that's when I started selling the stuff. I sold more and more all the time and was really doing a good business when I finally got out almost two years later.

"The junkies out in the big cage got to me quick and they used a lot of different ways to try and get me to cooperate with them. They offered me money, all kinds of things ranging from tobacco to jewelry and then threatened me, too.

"Well, I'm only human and since I didn't have any relatives or friends outside to send me things, this was an easy way for me to get some of the comforts that make life in jail worth living. So naturally I took advantage of the situation.

"I must make it clear that I'm against the rough drugs, such as heroin or cocaine, as are most people.

"Though I'm sure I could have done it, I would never have had any part in spreading their use in any way.

"The drugs I sold included such substances as Dexedrine, a drug which if taken in sufficient dose can make you 'high'; Largactil, a sedative which can also give a 'lift,' sleeping pills such as sodium amytol or Tuinal, which can become addictive; and a pep pill.

"I would get word that a certain prisoner wanted some drugs. Many wanted sleeping pills but a lot wanted doses of the stimulant drugs to hoard so that when they had enough they could spend a few hours in a binge.

"There was a set price. If, for instance, I sold a man three grains of sodium amytol daily for a week, I'd get half an ounce of tobacco.

"I was a non-smoker so I used to swap it for something I wanted.

"Dexedrine worked out at one or two grains a day for half an ounce of tobacco.

for half an ounce of tobacco a week.

"If a man was in a position to have cash sent in, in letters addressed to me, that money would be put in my account that I got when I got out. A number of times I had money sent in. Sometimes I was handed cash.

"I could never let a prisoner have credit longer than a month, in case the scheme was discovered.

"The key to the whole scheme rested in two books, heavily-bound, like ledgers. The first was the doctor's morning sick book in which one of the three prison doctors who had taken the sick call entered a prescription against a man's name, and the number of days he was to receive it.

"Each day, the details were transferred to the weekly medical book from which each day's doses were made up.

"Every Saturday the officer on duty at the hospital had to review the book.

"He had to cross out any courses of treatment that were finished and re-enter on the next page all outstanding treatments.

"That was where I came in. This job was left to me. Every Saturday I took the book to my cell to write out treatments for the following week.

"It was the simplest thing in the world to write in doses for my customers. And nobody, during the 18 months I had the job, ever bothered to check the details I entered.

"In several cases where men had difficulty sleeping, the doctor would prescribe one and a half grains of a drug. The man might complain that was not enough but be refused more.

"If the man agreed to my terms I'd write him up for three grains.

"I never went too far. I always kept the doses down to a reasonable amount. I would hate to have it on my mind that I created drug addicts but most of these drugs can become addictive, so there was a risk.

"From the cash point of view I did not make a lot of money, about $2,000 in all. But I lived very well, far better than other prisoners.

"Tobacco is worth at least $2 an ounce inside. My legal wages for the job I was doing were $1 a week. But my drug selling brought me in an average of five ounces of tobacco a week, which is a lot of money in jail.

"I had a television set and record player with about 100 records in my cell. I had a blue fitted carpet, pink bedspread, colored table cloths, all bought with tobacco from other prisoners who were entitled to have these things sent in.

"I arranged extra food throughout my stay; bacon and eggs every morning when the others were having mush.

"I was always getting little extras from the commissary, such as candy, cookies, butter and sugar, all bought with the profits of my drug racket.

"I know the authorities are worried about the spread of drug-taking and I felt I could warn them about the sort of thing that goes on.

"I am not proud of what I did. But men do odd things in jail. I'm going straight now and it's all behind me.

DRUNK RAPIST FINED $1,200

Facing a possible double death sentence after being convicted of the rape of ten and eleven year-old girls, a soldier in Lenggries, Germany, got off with only a bust in rank and a $1,200 fine.

Sergeant Wilbur Timmons, a Signal Corps instructor told the Army Courts Martial, "I couldn't believe anything like that could have happened," as he relived the nightmare of the drunken rape assault of his German landlord's pre-teen daughters.

"I got a butcher knife out of the drawer," the haggard soldier recalled his attempt at suicide when a neighbor told him what he had done, "But someone Earlier, the 36-year-old father of three confessed to police that he had raped Anna and Theresia D., aged 10 and 11, and committed indecent assaults on both them and their 12 year-old sister, Barbara. In the courtroom, however, Timmons pleaded that he was drunk and "don't actually remember leaving my place". His apartment was located on the floor above where the three girls lived.

The jury convicted the sergeant of raping the two younger girls, but cleared him of the indecent assault charges, then astonished the tense spectators by giving him the mild reprimand and letting him stay in the Army.

Oh Sammy, that was a show!

Sammy Davis, Jr., flew into Munich, Germany, to do a quick show with some of the other cast members in Europe for the filming of "Blow Up" and then planned to take a quiet look around like most other tourists. Well, it didn't work that way and from the time he got off the plane til he got back on it, he and beautiful Lola Falana were adopted by the Germans for a round of unending fun. Sammy did have to agree "That was a show, man!"

IS THE HEART BLACK?

Even as the world starts to applaud the miracle of heart transplants, the critics are finding fault.

The first attacks almost before the world became completely aware of what a heart transplant could mean to man in his endless quest to fight the battle against death.

For did not that first operation take place in a country where there are more Blacks than Whites?

And even there, the first topic of conversation was not so much about the miracle that was being born, but of the moral right of a white man to accept the heart of one whose skin was black.

The discussion brought back memories of the early days of blood transfusions when people refused to accept blood necessary for survival unless they could have assurances that the blood came only from white donors.

It seems that a matter of life and death tends to decrease the value of arguments from those who believe it wrong to accept Black man's blood.

But the lesson was not learned well—or is it that most of the new generation of critics feel that they will never be faced with a choice between a Black man's heart and death. Only the days of death will truly provide that answer.

But back to the critics—in addition to the color bias blast, another group of people are concerned over the idea that medical men may become organ vultures.

Latest charge in this area comes from a doctor in charge of an intensive care unit in a hospital who state that transplant surgeons hang around his patients like a "gang of vultures."

"When you have a patient with a reasonably fit set of organs, you have a gang of vultures crowding around the patient's bed trying to snatch the organs—starting with the cornea and ending with the heart and kidneys."

At the recent World Congress of Anaesthesiologists, doctors from nations around the world were told, "It is a hell of a problem. Usually the families of the dead and near dead are in a state of shock and no one ever will know if the decisions made under stress would have been the same under normal conditions."

One speaker at the conference said, "The reason for all the trouble is the idea that we must make the names of the people involved public. If there was only some way we could use the organs anonymously, like we do blood, no one would give a damn if they came from monkeys as long as people's lives were saved. This talk about mixing the races is just a bag of garbage."

LIFE A HEARTBEAT AWAY

By Robert Ward

In the gloved hands of Texas surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley, the heart of 48-year-old book salesman James Cobb is poised for a few dramatic seconds.

A camera records the literally heart-stopping moment between the removal of the diseased heart from Cobb's body and its replacement by the heart of 15-year-old William Brannon, who died after a motorcycle crash.

This, the first released picture of a heart transplant operation in progress, symbolises the achievement and the problems of surgeons. The operation—the world's eleventh heart transplant—took place at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital in Houston.

For Dr. Cooley it was the second of three heart transplants that he was to perform over a period of five days.

For James Cobb it was the start of a fight for survival against the known medical odds.

The fight ended fifty-four hours later. Cobb, his body overwhelmed by its own bacteria, died. But his new heart had shown no signs of rejection—the biggest hazard in transplant surgery.

Since that operation Cooley has performed eight more. His success rate is high; seven patients still survive. Two of them, Everett Thomas, a trust consultant, and Louis Fierro, a second-hand car salesman, recovered enough to leave St. Luke's and resume work. The other five are "progressing well."

Cooley, 48, forecasts that transplants will be routine operations within the next five years with, eventually, mechanical hearts as the real solution.

Like other transplant surgeons he worked against a background of controversy which he counters by saying: "The real issue is not whether we are going to offer a transplant to a patient, but whether we are going to deny it to someone who is in the last hour of his life."

He adds: "It isn't a question of courage on the part of the surgeon. To me, it is the only intelligent and human thing to do."

IS THAT?...YES, IT IS...JIM BROWN.....

She has been called the Girl Who Can Speak With Her Body and A Female Charles Atlas Wearing Band-Aids. He is 225 pounds of muscle stretched 74 inches high and a Cleveland Browns' star turned actor.

And when the producers of 100 Rifles brought Black Jim Brown and White Raquel Welch together as lovers, they knew that the instant explosion would be at the box office.

There is some thought that people in the Deep South will recoil at hot-uncontrolled love making between a black man and a white woman, but maybe they'll stretch their understanding capacity because Miss Welch is portraying an Indian.

This scene, by the way, shows what happens when a Red Indian on the warpath attacks a big, tough U.S. Marshal—just about all he can do is what Jim Brown is doing—accept it.

IN BRITAIN THEY'RE THE BLACK BIRDS

The British have a way of casually putting together words to describe just about anything or anyone and girls are no exception.

Since a pretty girl in England is a Bird, what better term than "Black Bird?" they ask. It isn't just a Black Bird world to them, however, and when they spot one of our Birds on the street, they say, "Look at the (beige, brown or coffee) Black Bird."

But the inquiring photographer who took these pictures found that the girls didn't mind being "Black Birds," just as long as they can still be called birds.

Since you're now wondering what these Black Birds are doing in England in the first place, let us tell you about them (starting top right and going clockwise):

BARBARA HOPEWELL, 23, works in a fur shop and reports that her biggest problem is her hair. Says she owns four wigs and eight hairpieces.

CHARLOTTE GREEN, 22, is a model and actress and prefers vivid colors which makes her quite a standout in usually pastel-conscious England.

YOLANDE HUGHES, 22, is a secretary who says she's never without something to do and someone to do it with. She does her own hair, a novelty in London.

PHYLLIS HOLDER, 25, is a model at a leading fashion house and gets outfits like those soft crepe trousers she's wearing.

EUNICE CROWN, 20, is a Bunny Girl at the Playboy Club and says she couldn't find a better place to work. But she still doesn't like England.

PATRICIA HAYES, 23, is a photographers' model who likes living in England, but only because it's close to France where she goes to buy clothes.

SEX SLAYER SOBS OUT BIZARRE CONFESSION

Nothing like it had ever been heard in open court before. As the 33-year-old defendant sat motionless and stared down at the floor blankly, his whimpering, sobbing, sometimes angry confession to a government psychiatrist, ground out of a portable tape recorder.

On trial for the sex slaying of high living State Department secretary Shirley Ann Cary, was 33-year-old Walter Lee Parman. As a part of his insanity defense, the accused's attorneys introduced the complete confession before the jury and Judge John J. Sirica of U.S. District Court. The hour long recording had been made several months earlier at St. Elizabeth's mental Hospital while Parman was under the influence of sodium pentathol—the so-called truth serum.

Parman's speech was heavy with the most crude obscenities and vulgarities, and psychiatrist Dr. Oscar Legault, talked in the same manner on the recording to put the defendant at ease.

"I knocked her down... tied her up... bit her," Parman admitted in his rambling speech at the high-point of his eerie confession, "...she wasn't crying... conscious most of the time... I killed her... strangled her with a rope... she said just one thing, 'Oh, my God!'"

The entire courtroom sat dumbstruck and spellbound as the truth-drugged Parman detailed the whole night of terror from start to finish. Under the persistent coaxing of Dr. Legault, he described how he picked up Miss Cary and her girl friend at a Washington night club and bought them a drink. He told of how the other girl finally left the two of them alone at a downtown night spot that featured belly dancers.

"A girl was dancing..." Parman's haunting voice cracked through the tape machine's small loud-speaker, "She could really ripple... always wished I had a harem (voice becomes light and happy)."

The defendant went on to say that he walked the slim and attractive secretary to his apartment at 2021 O St. NW "like a couple of high school kids, walking hand in hand... sort of touched in the head."

And then the voice of Dr. Legault was heard pressing Parman to tell more, arousing him to the point where he could re-live the grizzly rape-murder: "Go ahead.

Keep talking, Walter. Did you kiss her when you got in your apartment?"

"No," the defendant replied in a low whisper, then described how he became angry while attempting to have sexual intercourse with the attractive State Department girl in his bedroom. He said they were both "woozy in the head" from too much to drink.

Suddenly, Parman's drugged voice became violently angry when he recalled, "I began to treat her like a tramp!" And he went on to say that he hit the girl twice when she became "belligerent".

Parman then told the doctor that he tied her up

The ever-growing success of Bill Cosby is putting him in a pay bracket that makes a lot of other night club performers envious—like, say, $20,000 a night.

No one is really ready to tell the true story of why Florence Ballard split away from the original Supremes but her now "Love Ain't Love" recording is already on the way to making her a top single star.

TV-cafe comedian SLAPPY WHITE asked us if we knew why he wasn't mentioned in PEARL BAILEY'S autobiography, "Raw Pearl". "After all, I was married to her, and when we were divorced, I got the Baltimore home we bought, and gave it to my mother". If singer LA VERNE BAKER or the late DINAH WASHINGTON had biogs, SLAPPY (baptized "MELVIN") would rate inclusion by marriage to both; still is, to LA VERNE.

JIM BROWN and RAQUEL WELCH have gone 11 weeks in "100 Rifles" without saying a word to each other off the set. On screen they have some sizzling love scenes. This is not unusual. It just means one must act more.

STEVE WONDER, that exciting young soul singer, has been set by producer JOE PASTERNAK to guest-star with JANET LEIGH and ROGER MOORE in "The Girl From Paradise Island." Unfortunately, STEVIE won't be able to enjoy the lush scenery at the Bahamas resort where the film will be made. He has been blind since birth.

PEARL BAILEY, star of "Hello, Money!" pays $2,000 a month for her new pad and can afford it: "Dolly" sends her home with $8,000 a week.

SIDNEY POITIER is under a psychiatrist's care because, SID-

NEY says, his marital and outside romantic problems have put him in a state of utter confusion.

NICHELE NICHOLS doesn't like to be asked about the barriers she's faced as a Negro entertainer. The "Star Trek" actress tells me that it is a question "that makes me look too far into myself." She admits her race has been a barrier. But there were other barriers, too, particularly being a woman. "I don't care what anyone says. It's still a man's world," she said. Back on the subject of race relations, NICHELE says that the biggest problem for a Negro to overcome is betterness. "You have to be careful, because if you didn't you can take out your bitterness on others and you end up changing yourself."

BARBARA McNAIR, who makes her motion picture debut as Lily in "If He Hollers, Let Him Go!" now adds another dimension to a career that has already taken her to the top as a singer, stage and television performer. Her career has been steadily growing, starting in small clubs and expanding to include the prestige showplaces of the country.

Last Christmas she went to Vietnam with the BOB HOPE troupe. She got her Broadway break in "The Body Beautiful" which folded quickly, however. Then came important engagements from Las Vegas. When RICHARD RODGERS sought a star for the National Company of "No Strings," he selected BARBARA. She also replaced DAHANN CARROLL on Broadway before going on tour with HOWARD KEEL.

The "No Strings" tour led to many TV appearances. She has appeared on virtually every top entertainment show from "ED SULLIVAN" and "DEAN MARTIN" to "The Hollywood Palace" and the "Tonight Show."

Fine young soul-singer LOU and MRS. RAWLS expect to start the lullabies any edition. LOU signed for five major TV shows within several days: BENNY, SKELTON, DILLER, H'wood Palace, JONATHAN WINTERS.

JOHNNY HARTMAN, fine baritone now singing up a storm at MISS LACEY'S, makes his film debut in SIDNEY POITIER'S next movie.

"I Spy" star BILL COSBY'S personal pay for a one-nighter in Saratoga - $17,000.

Furs for men aren't so new: FATHER DIVINE decades ago paid furrier MIKE FORREST $20,000 for an ermine coat.

NBC's Negro newscaster BOB TEAGUE'S first book is titled "Letters to a Black Boy".

GREG MORRIS of "Mission Impossible" is off to Chicago to do benefits in the impoverished sections there. While others talk, GREG does. He's constantly on the move with his one-person drive to combat racial tensions and juvenile delinquency.

The alarming reports about LOUIS ARMSTRONG are exaggerated. His agent JOE GLASER says SATCH has been removed from "intensive care" and is improving. Doctors look with disfavor on his diet that slimmed him from 195 to 120. He will probably have to get fat again.

LESLIE UGGAMS bought a mansion in nearby Putnam County.

Agents say ARETHA FRANKLIN now has more imitators than BARBRA STRIESAND.

BARBARA LACEY is negotiating with SONJI CLAY, CASSIUS' ex, to make her local singing debut at MISS LACEY'S. SONJI just signed a contract with a Chicago recording firm.

CHRIS CALLOWAY (CAB's gifted, perky daughter) quit "Hello, Dolly" to get married, but won't return, though her marriage had a short jog.

MGM gave ex-gridster JIMMY BROWN (who has four unreleased films finished) CLARK GABLE'S old dressing room for "The Split"; also GABLE'S makeup man.

A top soul singer has her sycophants worried that she may be on "Hourse"; she's been on only slightly milder narcotics steadily.

FLIP WILSON for Atlantic Records brought a $51,000 check to his widow for the Martin Luther King Memorial Fund.

FLOYD PATTERSON may make his movie debut as the sailor-hero DORIE MILLER in 20th-Fox' "Tora! Tora! Tora!"

GODFREY CAMBRIDGE, whose new TV variety show is scheduled for next year, claims he calls CBS chief PERRY LAFFERTY late at night, "with suggestions like, 'I've got LeROI JONES for staff announcer.'" "I'll bet," chuckles CAMBRIDGE, "Lafferty doesn't get much sleep after that. In fact," adds the comic without bitterness, "if my people burn down three more cities, they'll make me president of CBS."

The new trend in Show Business seems to be Negro cowboys—and the first one in a regular TV series, OTIS YOUNG, is slightly embarrassed because he had a strange accident on horseback in Hollywood. His horse went to sleep. And he fell off. "Oh, sure, these horses fall asleep all the time," the 6-foot-2, 175-pound, 28-year-old ex-B'way actor said.

He used to be so poor around this town that he slept on subways, he told me. "All the time you hear the wranglers yelling at 'em 'Wake up!' You have to spin 'em around to keep them awake."

OTIS YOUNG'S appearing with DON MURRAY in the ABC series "The Outlaws", but while he may be the first Negro cowboy on TV, there are plenty of them in the movies. There were, of course, Negro cowboys

BROADWAY IS MY BEAT

By Dale Roberts

a century ago. In KAYE STEVENS' big opening at the Americana Royal Box, comedian TIMMIE ROGERS also spoke of Negro cowboys and confessed that it was the intention of the Negroes "to let the Indians win for a change."

SARAH VAUGHAN, a Rainbow Grill hit, wants Leonard Bernstein to write her an American opera.

The voice stirs a memory if the face does not. It is a little girl's voice, thin and piping. Think back to "Gone With the Wind" and you have it. It belongs to BUTTERFLY McQUEEN. She was Prissy, maid-servant to the O'Haras of Tara, and one remembers with delight the masterly evasion of work, the dawdling, the near-faints and flutters, the shrill cries of "Oh Miss Scarlett! Oh Miss Scarlett!" while the Battle of Atlanta (and Scarlett) raged.

Now a portly woman in the late 50's she bustled into

Schrafft's bearing what appeared to be a picnic basket which contained, among other items, a bunch of throwaways (or leaflets) on "CURLEY McDIMPLE," a small off-Broadway musical at the Bert Wheeler Theater. She has a starring role in it. "When people ask me what I'm doing now, I hand them one of these throwaways," she said. "The producer calls me his 'miracle' because we've managed to keep the show going into the ninth month."

Pearl Bailey should be singing the money song every time she appears in "Hello Dolly"—she's getting a reported $8,000 every week in the hit musical.

The popularity of Sammy Davis Jr. in Europe was never questioned as he went from one country to another making friends everywhere he appeared. This affectionate drawing of him was used to illustrate a German newspaper story telling of his amazing talent.

SOME SUMMER MEMORIES FOR ACHILLY DAY

It's time to realize that a long, cold winter is coming and what better way to remember the pleasant summer past than with this memory of lovely Jackie.

Her tempting summer antics were captured on film just for those cold days when a guy wonders if things will ever get normal enough again to head out for the pool and a day of relaxation. Jackie hasn't got those worries this winter since she's planning to take off for the warm lands of the south just the time you'll be looking at these photos.

YOU and NUMEROLOGY

By Bishop Daddy Mayruss Fielding

CAPRICORN

December 22nd - January 20th

This is obviously not going to be the happiest month of the year for you. Opposition from your close relations will be more than evident around the fourth, seventh, eighteenth and twenty-second and, consequently, it will be difficult for you to establish any semblance of harmony in your home until the twenty-fifth.

This month watch for: 471, 615, 071, 893 and 976.

AQUARIUS

January 21st - February 19th

Working conditions may become so unpleasant that you may be wise to change jobs. However, it is unlikely that you will be able to make any progress in this direction until after the twentieth.

This month watch for: 010, 767, 172, 839 and 139.

PISCES

February 20th - March 20th

Although Saturn may be creating havoc with your finances, most of the other planetary influences are to your advantage. The most marvelous aspect of all concerns your health and well-being. Pisceans cannot usually be described as robust individuals, but your vitality at this time should be more than sufficient to allow you to cope with any problems—except around the twenty-seventh.

This month watch for: 237, 071, 474, 521 and 095.

ARIES

March 21st - April 20th

You are not going to be much fun to live with this month, and your home and everyone connected with it are going to be your chief concerns; so much so, in fact, that it is doubtful whether you will be able to concentrate on anything else.

This month watch for: 062, 304, 084, 812 and 424.

TAURUS

April 21st - May 21st

This month you could do much better if fewer relatives were around. Since they are in possession of so many of your secrets, you must be utterly charming if you want to avoid provoking them into revealing your past mistakes.

This month watch for: 696, 876, 778, 862 and 937.

GEMINI

May 22nd - June 21st

Your finances are once again about as bleak as they can be, and you must now pay off your debts to ward off further danger. Don't bother to turn to your friends for help, for it's doubtful whether they'll be in a position to offer assistance, and you must assume your own responsibilities for your arrears.

This month watch for: 793, 025, 797, 038 and 404.

CANCER

June 22nd - July 23rd

You will remember the 7th for a long time. Changes affecting your career will occur around this time and, although initially you may be haunted by furtive fears about your future, you are in fact entering a period when your success and social standing could be at their zenith.

This month watch for: 282, 072, 045, 153 and 771.

LEO

July 24th - August 23rd

If Leo is, as they say, the sign of the King, then you may have a tiny rebellion on your hands this month. Although you'll undoubtedly win in the end (Leos always do!), don't underestimate the power of your adversaries around the fourth, seventh and eighteenth.

This month watch for: 560, 520, 684, 633 and 349.

VIRGO

August 24th - September 23rd

Choose your friends wisely this month, and, above all, do not become involved in any new business partnerships. Any form of friendship could be upsetting around the seventh, but don't let others take advantage of your sensitive and unassuming disposition. Around the twenty-seventh, relatives will, as usual, attempt to meddle in your affairs.

This month watch for: 697, 494, 214 and 709.

LIBRA

September 24th - October 23rd

No amount of charm or evasiveness will placate your partners this month, and even to terminate any relationship may prove costly. You must act directly and purposefully in all matters affecting your career.

This month watch for: 288, 433, 098, 392 and 851.

As the year draws to a close, it is interesting to note that a great many of the readings I have been providing to It's Happening readers during 1968 have been accurate. It is a record of which I am extremely proud and I believe that those of you who have been following my forecasts have been able to more accurately predict those number sequences that affect your life so very much.

I am presently working on a new edition of my popular Almanac and Dream Book and it should be ready for you in a very short period of time. As most of you know, I completely update all portions of the book annually to take into consideration those national and galaxy trends that mean so much to the serious student of numerology. The new edition will feature accurate dream interpretations, card playing data, competitive event combinations, horoscopes and numbers of special value in interpreting names and important dates in your daily life. You can reserve your copy of the 1969 edition in advance by sending cash, check or money order for $3.00 to Good Fortunes Company, 1075 East 65th Street, Cleveland, Ohio, 44103. The price includes all handling and postage charges and your personal copy will be mailed to you as soon as it comes off the press early in the year.

During the rest of the year, the number 17 will appear in combinations and its influence should not be forgotten in considering all numerical sequences. The numbers 4 and 9 also will be of special interest in sporting events and may be the deciding factor in a great number of plans you may make. Special Blessing numbers are 451, 638, 917, 265 and 414. Popular double digits are 44 and 77. Watch for 1 and 5 late in the week during the period.

SCORPIO

October 24th - November 22nd

The eighteenth and twenty-second are two other dates when you may have to face some sort of health problem. Travel will be restricted or postponed and, until after the twenty-second, you can expect delays and disappointments in any foreign interests.

This month watch for: 691, 967, 489, 661 and 057.

SAGITTARIUS

November 23rd - December 21st

Your Sagittarian arrow of directness will be way off the mark this month, particularly in romance. A relationship will probably be ended around the seventh but, as travel is so well favored, perhaps you may be wise to take a trip, if only to forget.

This month watch for: 033, 078, 121, 884 and 968.

'PREACHERS GO INTO THE PULPIT DRUNK.. CRITICIZE WARD SINGERS FOR SINGING IN NIGHTCLUB'---GERTRUDE WARD CLAIMS

Ask any of the "now generation" what it was like to keep body and soul together during the late twenties and they'd probably react with a blank stare. Ask Gertrude Ward, founder of the world famous Ward Gospel Singers, and you'll get one of the most inspiring stories of our century.

In this exclusive interview, Mrs. Ward reveals for the first time in print how she came to be called upon to sing the Lord's praises as no one else alive has done.

The beginning goes back to what seems an eternity ago. For it was in 1927 that Gertrude Ward stood on the corner of 40th and Gerard Avenue in Philadelphia and waited for the white folk to come by and pick up Black women for a day's work.

"We were struggling then," reflects Mrs. Ward, "and I would get ten cents an hour. And since they'd only want us to work a couple of hours each time they picked us up, that'd only be 20 cents a day and that was what we had to eat on.

"I had pasteboard in my shoes for soles and I'd stand in the snow and it would soak through and my naked feet would be on the ground soaking wet. But I was trying to make a living.

"Then I was pressing clothes in a cleaning and dye place at 19th Street and Montgomery Avenue (Philadelphia). That was in 1931. I heard a voice that spoke to me so plain. It said, 'Go sing my Gospel and help save dying men and women.' And I answered, 'Lord, I can't sing.'

"Then the lady who was working in back of me said 'Who are you talking to?' I told her what I heard, but added that I didn't really think it was the Lord. She insisted that it certainly could have been. I'd always sung in the choirs and I took the leading part in the anthem, but Gospel? Everybody sings hymns, but me? A Gospel singer?

"Not long after that I was invited to sing a solo at Ebanezer Baptist Church on Women's Day. It was the first time I'd ever sung alone and I did 'Since I gave to Jesus my poor broken heart/ He never has left me alone/ Since I did for the homeland eternal start/

He never left me'.

"Later, I was back at 40th and Gerard waiting for another job when I heard that same voice say 'Sing My Gospel'. And it said, this time, 'Why look for a job when you already have one?'

"Well, I didn't say a word. If we were standing on that corner right now, I'd show you how I turned around, crossed the street and took out the last eight cents I had. I used six cents to catch the trolley car home.

"With the other two cents I bought some white potatoes. I boiled them made gravy and we ate that with water--No bread, coffee or tea. But from that day till this I've had no other job except that of singing for the Lord."

But what of the people who object to the Ward Singers going "out into the world" and singing Gospel in such places as nightclubs and Disneyland?

"I don't know if they've accepted it by now or not," says Mrs. Ward. "They thought that when we went out into clubs we'd be singing blues and jazz and rock-'n-roll. But we sing the same songs in the clubs that we sing in church. And it's wonderful how they accept Gospel singing sometimes even more than people do in church.

"I remember when we were in Oslo, Norway, in a club and everybody was drinking. Of course, they'd never heard of the Ward Singers. But when we began our first song we started seeing people taking their glasses off the tables and putting them on the floor next to their chairs.

"When we finished, there wasn't a glass on any table in the place. Everyone was listening strictly to the singing and even started clapping their hands. You'd have thought you were in a sanctified church. It's been that way everywhere we've gone in the world.

"And when it comes to foul language, I've heard worse in some churches than I've ever heard in any nightclub. We sang in Las Vegas for three years, four times a night, and we never once heard a curse word.

"I would rather sing in a club sober than in a church drunk, as some Gospel singers do. We're supposed to be representing Christ. And preachers aren't supposed to go into the pulpit drunk or sit around in their studies with whiskey, but we find that going on. Yet they still want to criticize the Ward Singers for singing in nightclubs.

"The Bible says 'Go ye into all the world (and that's what Christ told all his disciples) and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. And he that believeth not shall be damned'.

"And He didn't stop there. A little further over in Luke He said 'Go ye unto the hedges and to the high-ways and compel them to come, that my house shall be filled.' And I believe we have reached out and touched as many souls in nightclubs as we have in churches."

WIFE GETS AXED FOR TURNING DOWN SEX IN AFTERNOON

Alfred Martin, 25, a Fresno, California carpet installer, was always too tired to love his wife, Helen, 23, after they went to bed. "I can't do it in the morning, either, without being too tired to do my work without doing something stupid like cutting a piece of high price carpet too short."

He told a co-worker he felt the most like a human bull between 3 and 4 p.m. This prompted him to drive the company's truck to his house at 3:30 and enjoy his wife.

"We had us a wonderful romp," he said. "We both were satisfied when we finally unclined."

He was elated when he drove the truck back to the warehouse to load it for the next day's work. "This no longer seems like a stevedore task," he said to his wife when he came home for supper.

"Tomorrow," he added happily, "I'll sneak off the job again at approximately 3:30."

"Even if I am beat when I go back I only go an hour or so to suffer. Besides the concentrating part of my work, such as measuring and cutting, is earlier in the day so my afternoon drags won't lose me my job."

Mrs. Martin told her happy husband she didn't want him to come home for any more afternoon games. "The neighbors will catch on. The naturally know we make love but I don't want them to know the exact time.

"Also the kids are gonna be coming in to see what we're up to."

Martin came home the next afternoon a little before 4 p.m. "I had to force her," he told his friend. "She wasn't going to put it out."

Mrs. Martin still was mad when he came home for supper. "I'm going to punish you by making you go without sex for at least a month!" she said.

"I don't appreciate being raped!"

She enforced this edict. "I didn't try coming home on company time," Martinex said. "I would of been risking a knife cut or something."

Co-workers said he got more surly by the day. "We could tell his basic sex needs were not being taken care of," they told officials.

Police said this situation finally caused Martin to go wild. He drove home and chopped off his wife's head with an axe. Then he strangled his little daughter and two small sons.

When this grisly deed was done he poured gasoline over the house and ignited it. "He got caught in the flames before he could get out," Investigator Richard Megrete said.

"He died flailing in agony on the rear service porch."

CUSSING BIRD CAUSES FLAP IN WASHINGTON

Washington's latest obscenity scandal had the whole town talking. Everyone from the President, Congressmen, foreign Ambassadors, and right down to the janitors who clean up the used red tape at the Pentagon each night, have read with growing concern the day-by-day account in the local press.

Newspaper editorials as well as inflamed "Letters To The Editor" in the dailies in the nation's capital, have demanded action. Civil Liberties groups have threatened intervention on the basis of Constitutional rights and recent decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The whole thing started one quiet day when a crowd of gawking tourists from all over the country was gathered around the bird cage at the Washington Zoo, known technically as the National Zoological Park, and run by the very proper Smithsonian Institution.

Suddenly, during one of those rare moments when everything was abruptly quiet, one of the talking mynah birds gave out with a long low whistle at a couple of girls in shorts, and then repeated twice, very loud and clear, a highly controversial phrase containing one of the better known Anglo-Saxon four-letter words.

"What did the bird say?" an astonished grandmotherly type from Iowa was reported to have asked her equally elderly female companion, adding with a smile, "I'm just sure it didn't say what I thought it said. . . oh my. . ."

As if understanding the woman's disbelief, the dirty old bird was said to repeat with an arrogant tone, "F--- you! F--- you!"

That did it! Reacting immediately to a barrage of complaints from witnesses, Zoo officials apprehended the foul-mouthed fowl without due process of law and placed it in solitary. That way, he explained, not only would the bird cease to be a bother to visitors, but other birds could not become contaminated by picking up the infamous expression from the naughty creature.

Newspapers had a heyday with the story. Tongue-in-cheek editorials and pun-filled articles and letters followed. "No mynah matter," the WASHINGTON POST trumpeted in its attack on the Zoo's summary action. "The rights of the mynahbird must be respected." "Any bird has a right to use fowl language!", "Who contributed to the delinquency of the mynah?", went some of the other published commentaries.

Soon, an intrepid reporter tracked down the story of how the mynah's speech had become corrupted. Mrs. Winnie Meiselman of New York, the bird's former owner, said that it had learned the forbidden phrase from a drunken Israeli sailor at a New Year's Eve party in 1964.

And the Smithsonian, deluged with letters of protest over action against the bird, and continually attacked by the press, was forced to issue a statement. "I assure you we have no intention of ostracizing the beast from all living things," declared Mrs. Pam Wishny, the Zoo's information and Education Director, with scientific seriousness, adding sternly, "He shall, however, remain off exhibit until the breadth of his vocabulary can be determined."

Apparently, the Washington Zoo will have the last word, despite the repeated charges that the bird's unlawful confinement is a violation of civil rights, unconstitutional, and runs against the Supreme Court rulings on the legal definition of obscenity.

It is truly no mynah matter.

Fill it up?

Check your tires?

Or maybe.....

The restroom?

When Janet Cord, 19, drives up to a gas station and then gets out stark naked, there is one confused attendant standing there with his mouth open. It was all part of a movie scene but the gas station operator is real and although he told the movie producer it wouldn't bother him, he was just plain embarrassed when the scene was actually shot. It's a Candid Camera idea that probably won't get too far.

DRAMATIC SCIENCE DISCOVERY MEANS 'NO MORE DRUNKS'

A sensational new way to lower the alcohol in a drinking man's blood may soon be no farther than the nearest drugstore.

That is the miraculous prospect held out by a pair of West German physicians who claim discovery of a new substance called FH-64—that will really do the trick.

Eighteen months of scientifically documented laboratory tests have borne out proof of the product's success, according to Drs. Joachim Hoeflmayr and Rudolf Fried of Munich. Taken as prescribed, FH-64 will permit a man to guzzle what would normally exceed the 1.5 limit for drivers under most state laws, and walk away from a blood-alcohol test with flying colors.

The drug, which tastes something like honey, "reduces alcohol content in the blood between 45 and 50 per-cent," Dr. Fried said. Though most of the laboratory tests were conducted with 400 alcoholic white mice, the physicians said they eventually used themselves as guinea pigs to confirm the effect on humans.

At a recent demonstration, five mice received doses of plain water while another five were administered FH-64. Thirty minutes later—enough time for the substance to take effect—all ten mice were given equal shots of 40% ethyl alcohol. After waiting 20 minutes for the intoxicating alcohol to take effect, the mice were tossed into an observation cage.

The mice which received water instead of FH-64 were loaded! They stumbled all over themselves and each other. One of the more potted little animals tried to make it across the floor of the cage by crawling on his belly.

But the mice fixed up with FH-64 could have walked a white line without any trouble. They showed no effect from the potent dose of alcohol.

The doctors concluded the experiment by conducting blood-alcohol tests on all ten animals. The five without the secret drug registered 1.14 while those who had received FH-64 chalked up a fantastically low .62.

"We are negotiating with a firm in New York," Dr. Hoeflmayr told a group of reporters who witnessed the experiments. For business reasons, the two doctors will not reveal the formula for FH-64, but promise to publish more details when the contract with the New York manufacturer is completed.

Bunny Was Quick!

The trap was carefully set. Six policemen crouched in ambush.

At the other end was a cunningly-chosen bait designed to bring a midnight hunter to justice.

Three minutes later, Paul Brenaud drove his car slowly down the lane.

Suddenly, a plump rabbit darted out of the bushes. Brenaud accelerated, switched on his headlights, and crushed it under the car wheels.

He jumped out of the car and pounced on the rabbit. The policemen jumped out of the bushes and pounced on Brenaud.

Brenaud was fined $225 for illegal hunting.

FOLIES STILL CALLED BEST NUDIST SHOW

The Folies Bergere is one of the sauciest shows in the world and it is the nudest show in the world. It is a tribute to Paul Derval, who took it from the verge of bankruptcy to a corporation, that made $2.5 million last year.

The suburban Paris theatre of Asnieres was on the verge of bankruptcy until Paul Derval came up with the idea of writing a letter and having it reprinted and scattered around Paris.

It read, "Darling, I am dying to look into your eyes again."

"My husband is letting me go to the Asnieres Theatre tonight but he does not know that I purchased two tickets to seats 12 and 13. Join me there."

Derval, the theater's director, saw his theater packed that night with people staring at seats 12 and 13, which remained empty.

Derval never sold the tickets.

He recently died at 86 after running the theater for 55 years. While he was still alive, he was proud that he helped start Maurice Chevalier, Josephine Baker and Charlie Chaplin. He was the first showman to introduce nude girls.

"My girls are not naughty women," he said, "By putting nudes on stage, I was just the first to cater to the public's taste for nudity. A nude woman can be very beautiful, especially if she has a well kept body."

Derval had a problem of prostitutes soliciting trade in the theater lobby.

"I stopped it," he said, although he admitted that the sight of the beautiful nudes could give a man ideas.

STRIPPED MODELS STOPPED THE TRAFFIC

Staid and proper Londoners out for a lunchtime stroll could not believe their eyes—but there it was for all to see: live and in living color!

In the store window of Harry Moss' brand new boutique on fashionable Carnaby Street, two luscious 20-year-old French models were gyrating their nearly nude torsos in a go-go-twist as they prepared to model Mod fashions for the growing mob of buy-eyed onlookers.

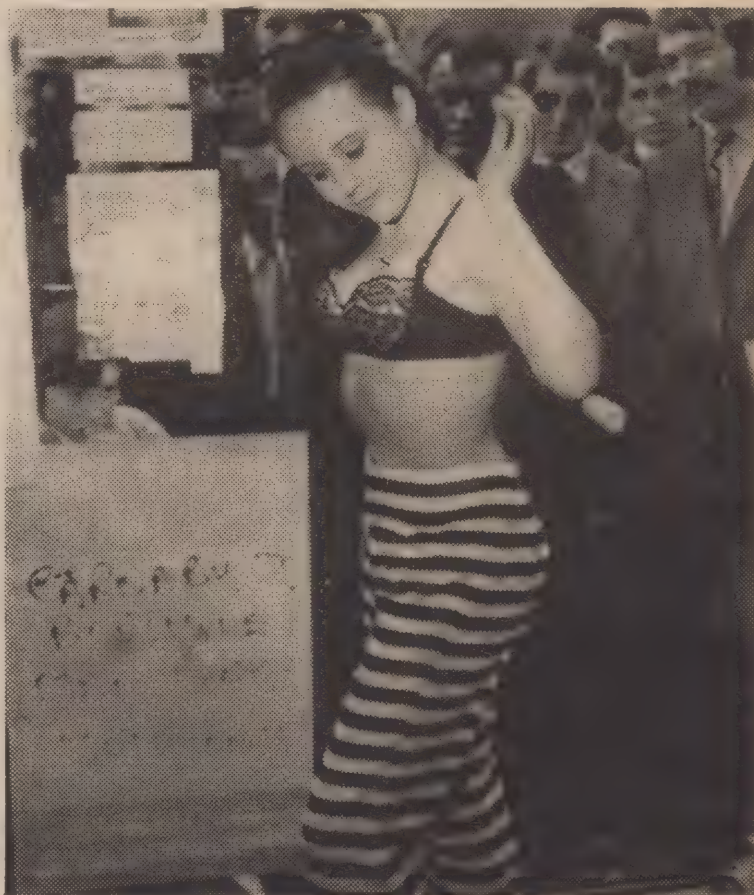

With a saucy gallic wink and mean twist of her rolling hips, lush bodied Jina Baker walked right up the glass in nothing but the briefest of nylon briefs and a gossamer net bra that left nothing to the imagination. Clad with equally revealing brevity, pulsating Diane James came up beside her and handed the girl a pair of stretch slacks.

As the crowd "oohed" and "aahed" demonstratively, Jina wriggled her long legs and restive buttocks into the attire while Diane held up a price card. With bosoms and bottoms bouncing appealingly, the girls then proceeded to go through several other wardrobe changes with equal verve.

The crows soon swelled to 500, and enterprising store owner Harry Moss rubbed his hands with glee over the sensational success of his advertising gimmick. Over a hundred male noses pressed against the glass while panting mouths frosted up the window slightly.

A squad of police arrived on the scene, and after getting over the titillating shock of the first eyeful, tried to get the growing crowd to move on. By then, the hundreds of onlookers had stretched across the street and were stopping vehicular as well as pedestrian traffic. They absolutely refused to budge an inch.

CROWD IGNORES POLICE

Riot cars specially equipped with loudspeakers moved in. They blared orders to move on or face arrest. They were completely ignored.

A Scotland Yard superintendent finally drove up and laid down the law to Moss: Out go the go-go Mod models or it'll be the Jailhouse Rock for the publicity minded store owner and his grand opening.

The show went on.

More police clanged up, this time with a paddy wagon, and carted Moss off to jail where he went into a quick huddle with his lawyers. Back came the instructions to the mobile mannequins to "put it on" and call it quits.

Great groans of protest arose from the enthralled mob of males eyeballing the show from outside. And, moments later, they quietly dispersed, returning to their offices with empty stomachs and fond memories.

MEN IN FEMALE DRESS USUALLY ARE HARMLESS

skirt in the ward, and naturally this concession made him very happy and patients did not object.

Not long ago a judge in a Western city ruled that women should not appear on the streets wearing trousers or anything resembling trousers. But in the final analysis, just how far can a jurist go in deciding how folks shall dress? What does it matter, some folks argue, how an individual dresses providing no immorality is involved; even where there is suspicion of immorality, it would seem to be up to somebody to prove immorality legally. There cannot be a law for the male that does not apply to the female; if it is legally wrong for a man to wear a dress in public (it has to be admitted that it is a bit bizarre). Then it is just as wrong (and just as bizarre) for a female to wear male attire in public; there should be no distinction made. To many folks this is sound logic and seems to meet with the approval of the sexologists. Neither male nor female Transvestists do anybody any serious harm, although the male Transvestist generally causes a lifting of eye-brows.

What is the cause of Transvestism: Very often thoughtless parents have been responsible for development of Transvestism through dressing their young boys in dresses and allowing the hair to grow long. Thus Transvestism is "inborn," though of course it may be developmental. Parents who wanted a girl rather than a boy frequently make this serious mistake.

We recently read a book titled "Transvestism—Men in Female Dress," edited by the eminent sexologist, D. O. Cauldwell, M. D. In his thesis Dr. Cauldwell presents several theories about the origin and mechanics of Transvestism. According to a recent article, he thinks that Transvestism may be associated with endocrinological factors. "These may be subsidiary," he writes, "but it seems hard to believe that Transvestism does not have other causes. One's sex goes right through one's bones. The sex of prehistoric skeletons 30,000 years old has easily been determined."

Dr. Cauldwell says he has examined many persons whose physical sex identity was not obvious. "Sometimes an operation and microscopic study of their sex glands was necessary to determine their sex. Yet in almost every case, although frequently brought up as the wrong sex, their psychosexual or mental sex coincided with their physical sex when it was ultimately determined. The theory is therefore projected—most sexologists agree with this—that Transvestism is a psychological phenomenon and is not dependent on the physical sex."

The confirmed Transvestist will go to any extreme to indulge his enonism. We once had a long letter from a young man just released from the army who wanted to know if we could tell him of any state where he would be allowed to wear female clothing in public without molestation by the police. Not to entirely disappoint him we suggested that if he could afford such a trip he could go to China, where many males wear skirts and females wear trousers. It was far from a reassuring reply, but the best we could do in the circumstances.

Probably to the end of time male Transvestists will beat their heads against the stone wall of public disapproval and probably police action.

Many female impersonators have found it possible to make a nice living by appearing in "night spots" in their beloved female dress. A "masculine woman" once confessed to the author that every true Transvestist is endowed with two natures—the true male nature that she must cultivate for the sake of Society, and the female nature which is natural for her and her Transvestist sisters. The true Transvestist, when dressed as a male, never wants to be anything but a MAN among MEN. And most male Transvestists want to be women among women, not just before mirrors in the privacy of their homes. Some male Transvestists own a wardrobe which many a woman would be happy to possess.

I once knew a male Transvestist who went out day or night without fear of detection, even among friends, who never recognized him. In female clothing he attended concerts, the movies and cafes; he occasionally went shopping and tried on the latest frocks, hats, etc. Most male Transvestists resent being classed as "fairies."

Many cases are on record where Transvestists, both male and female, have overcome their abnormality. But the longer the delay the less likelihood of complete cure. But the transvestite who has been cured will be richly rewarded by a sunnier and happier life.

THE SECRETS OF BLACK SEXUAL POWER

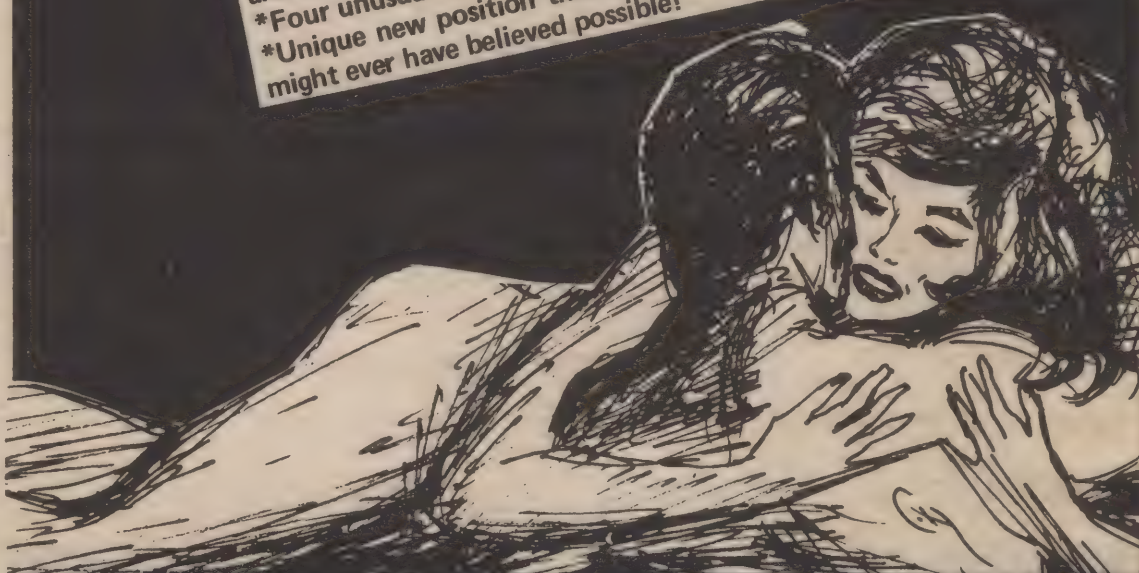

For the first time—the secrets of African sexual technique! BLACK SEXUAL POWER, by Kwame Lundola, is a marriage/sex manual written (in English) by an African for Africans. Never was it intended for a white audience! Not one word has been removed from the original edition!

What will be revealed to you is a far-reaching, post-graduate course in sex that introduces you to the secret world of African virility and intercourse, the most exotic practiced anywhere in the world. Also included, for the first time anywhere, is full and detailed information about the potent Afro-Aphrodisiacs, the food and drinks credited with stimulating sexual powers to almost super-human heights!

Do you wish to increase your potency? Could this book help you? (It's totally unlike those dozens of marriage/sex manuals on the market that are so bland, so obvious, they're almost useless.) No matter what you have read, no matter what you know—you cannot have glimpsed the ultimate until you have made the knowledge described in BLACK SEXUAL POWER your own!

WHAT YOU WILL FIND IN BLACK SEXUAL POWER
Read only a few pages at random, from any chapter, and you will see why no white man could have written this book. Explore the 14 detailed chapters of BLACK SEXUAL POWER and discover what exciting adventures await you and your wife. It is then you will discover what others have: African sexual practices draw forth your masculine powers to their very fullest, sometimes even beyond—and brings out in any woman more than you could ever imagine existed, sweeping away every restraint, in spite of yourselves!

EVERY DETAIL OF AFRICAN INTERCOURSE VIVIDLY DESCRIBED
For Example:
*51 virile African coital positions, many virtually unknown to the western world. Each offers a special delight, a new adventure!
*Eleven important ways of harnessing your sexual potential!
*Legendary Afro-Aphrodisiacs reputed to increase sexual potency and virility!
*Four unusual new approaches to the rear approach!
*Unique new position that can hold a limp erection tighter than you might ever have believed possible!

WOMAN STEALS THOUSANDS WHILE TELLING OLD MAN OF HER WEALTH

The man was over 70 and the woman was fat, almost fifty and wore thick glasses. But she was able to spin fairy tales well enough to separate him from $80,000 despite the fact that she claimed she had inherited more than $6 million.

Frances Pearson, 49, freely admitted in court that she was guilty as charged with stealing $100 from Edwin Leonard, 78, but then she went on to tell the court that they should also clear up the entire matter and sentence her on the basis of at least 92 cases in which she defrauded the man of money.

Leonard, a lock manufacturer, had first met Mrs. Pearson as the wife of a business associate. They became friends and Leonard frequently gave her small amounts of money in a series of "quick loans."

She told him a variety of fairy stories, including one that she was a very good friend of a Mrs. Van Jones, a wealthy woman who had, in fact, already been dead for more than four years.

Part of the story included her report that Mrs. Jones had adopted her and the two of them discussed Leonard, after which Mrs. Jones had Leonard investigated and was impressed with his character and background.

As a result of the investigation, Mrs. Pearson told Leonard, he was to be made a director of an international company with an annual salary of more than $25,000 plus a free house and all living expenses.

Leonard agreed to meet Mrs. Jones to discuss the position but at the last moment, he was told by Mrs. Pearson that Mrs. Jones had unexpectedly gone out of the country to handle some urgent business.

In 1964, she gave Leonard two letters, stating that she would inherit about $6 million and that he would receive about $750,000 and an annuity of $15,000 when Mrs. Van Jones died.

The letters were supposed to have been written by Mrs. Jones. They also asked him to "look after" Mrs. Pearson. Later, Leonard was told that the heiress had died.

All the time, Mrs. Pearson posed as an extremely ill woman requiring specialist treatment. For this, she got about $100 a week from Leonard. He believed her stories, and thinking that he would inherit the money, did not mind advancing cash to her.

"Leonard, who retired in 1965 with a fortune of $100,000 is now living on charity.

Then Leonard started receiving letters apparently from many eminent people. They were all forged by Mrs. Pearson, who told him that the settlement of the will was being held up because of a law suit by two banks.

When Leonard found his fortune disappearing, he sought advice from his son, a lawyer. The police were called and Mrs. Pearson was arrested. On the way to the police station, she said: "It is all a fairy story. None of it is true."

She later made a statement in which she referred to having had sexual intercourse with Leonard, but this he completely denied.

Mrs. Pearson's husband died in 1966. She had sons aged 28 and 22 and a daughter of 25, all living with her, and her aged parents. Her husband left her in 1960 and she had had no support from him.

Mrs. Pearson said that after taking her out socially,

Leonard went with her to his business premises where intimacy took place.

It was true that she told him a number of fairy stories and he offered to help her to the extent of about $100 a week. She spent it all on her family and there was no question of her living lavishly.

"Certainly she has fleeced this man," her lawyer said, "and the matter started by sexual attraction. The matter of age, in a man, where sexual attraction is concerned, is not provided there is such an attraction."

Jailing her for 21 months Judge R. E. Seaton said to Mrs. Pearson: "You are a person with a fertile imagination and no doubt your association with the loser in this case started on a sexual basis, otherwise it is difficult to imagine how it went on and on."

"The fact of the matter is, so far as you are concerned, from 1963 until your arrest you were a sort of human sacrifice and defrauded him."

CRAZED KILLER TALKS TO A TAPE RECORDER

and murdered her, saying the experience made him feel like "watching a movie with too many frames a second... my life was ended right there!"

The defendant then confessed that he took Miss Cary's dead body from his apartment and dumped it in an alley. He said that he hesitated then, confused about what to do next, before deciding "I'd better get the hell out of here!"

Parman also admitted that he fled town after that and tossed his victim's clothing and personal belongings from the window of his car onto the side of a road in West Virginia.

But the most poignant and moving part of the psychiatric interview-confession came at the very end. "You've done very well, Walter," Dr. Legault told the man with deep feeling, "You'll feel much better now."

"I want my momma...," the 33 year old Parman sobbed pitifully.

"I know you do, Walter," the doctor consoled, "Tell me why you didn't tell all of this to your lawyer before?"

"Such a horrible thing," the defendant's voice choked with emotion, adding, "...I didn't want to admit it to myself."

As the tape sputtered to an end in the hushed courtroom, Walter Lee Parman swallowed hard and kept staring down at the defense table in front of him.

PROSTITUTES IN VIETNAM MOVE INTO BATTLE ZONES FOR ACTION

Garishly colored plastic strips covering the doorway to the big tent flutter in the tropic breeze to keep out the flies.

Outside, the midmorning sun is blistering hot, but the large room of the tent is cool and dim.

The floor is made of rough brick. The tables and cheap basket chairs, like most furniture in Vietnam, are uncomfortably low for the long-legged Americans. There is a crude bar at one end of the room and a fast-exit door beyond the "pleasure area" in back.

Though it's only 10:30, several strikingly sensual Vietnamese girls in their revealing Ao-Dais sit at the tables.

This temporary house of pleasure is located in Bong Son, Viet Nam at the time this article is being written. And it is staffed by 15 lovely Oriental prostitutes ranging in age from 17 to 25, who move forward with members of the 1st Air Cavalry Division, whose headquarters is 50 miles away at An Khe.

"This is the first time we know of that prostitutes have actually followed the GI's," a First Cavalry officer said.

The reason for the move was simple, explained pretty, sad-eyed 17 year old Hevee: "Mama-san say no have GI, no can make money. GI go fight Viet Cong, girls have go too."

The party girls take all the trimmings with them when they set up for business right in the middle of the battle zone.

It costs 600 piastres (5.00) for a GI to take the diminutive and shapely little Hevee to the back room and enjoy her nubile and talented body for about 15 or 20 minutes. Others may charge as little as 300 piastres ($2.50). Local beer sells for the equivalent of 13 cents at the girl's portable bar in the outside room, and Coke for roughly 30 cents.

Business boomed both day and night for the girls until U.S. officials finally decided to put the brothel off limits. But troopers were not complaining too much about the ban.

"I'm just waiting 'til I can get back to the land of round-eyed girls anyway," said sergeant on the scene.

HUSBAND USES EMPTY GUN TO WIN BACK WIFE

James King of Crenshaw California, faced kidnapping charges after abducting his estranged wife, Paula, 22. King, 28, told officers that the abduction was an attempt to "win back" her love.

He was arrested by police and sheriff's officers after he had grabbed his wife in front of the savings and loan association where she worked.

He threatened a half dozen witnesses with a .45 calibre automatic, the witnesses told police. King later told investigators that he forced his pretty blonde wife into her car and they "drove around."

The couple stopped three times during the kidnap ride to allow King to call the loan office and the police. "I'm not going to hurt my wife," he said, "but I'm not going to bring her back today. I'll bring her back sometime tomorrow."

In a conversation with police, King said, "My wife's all right. Will I go to jail for this; You know the gun isn't even loaded. . . I'm just trying to get my wife back."

King was finally persuaded by police to give himself up in front of his home. The police found Mrs. King "hysterical but unhurt."

Make New Friends Through The Mail!

EXCITING NEW PERSONAL CORRESPONDENCE CLUB! Find people with the same interests as yours! Make new friends and pen-pals. There are thousands of people reading It's Happening now, today, who have similar interests to yours. These readers, male and female, are anxiously waiting to make new friends... and it could be you!

You can meet new people in two ways:

1. Read the ads in Sincerely Yours. If you find some you'd like to answer, merely write your letter to him or her. You are free to enclose your photo or whatever because the only person to see your letter is the one to whom you write. Place your letter in an envelope and seal it. At the upper right hand corner where you'd usually place the stamp, write the number of the ad the letter is to go to. Put this letter in another envelope with one dollar, cash, check or money order, and a postage stamp (6¢ first class, 10¢ air mail). Now address this second envelope to Sincerely Yours, 2075 East 65th Street, Cleveland, Ohio 44103. We will forward your letter, unopened, to the person whose ad you are answering. Your letters are completely confidential.

2. Write your own ad. Use the order blank you'll find in these pages. Create your own heading (no more than four words, please) and your own ad. Enclose payment as noted on the order blank. If you want your ad to run more than once, we allow a discount of 20 per cent. Send your ad and full payment to Sincerely Yours, 2075 East 65th Street, Cleveland, Ohio 44203. We reserve the right to edit copy to improve your ad. We guarantee that your name will be held in the strictest confidence. We will not divulge it to any person or organization unless specifically authorized by you.

IS A MAN A HOMOSEXUAL IF HE LIKES TO WEAR A WOMAN'S CLOTHING?

Hardly a day goes by when you don't hear someone comment on how boys are beginning to look more and more like girls and girls are hard to distinguish from men.

These comments have been growing in number as more and more men turn to garments and jewelry usually associated with women and members of both sexes mix up hair fashions to add to the confusion.

The mixing of sex identification isn't the property of either Black or White worlds—nor is it restricted to any of the mod, in, soul or hippy groups. It's just everywhere.

But the idea that it's something new is a real upside down statement. Probably the only thing that's new in the mixing of sex symbolism is the people involved. They're new and it seems like every generation in turn thinks that men just started wearing women's clothes and women just started getting their hair cut short or whatever the latest fad may be.

The current round of criticism does present some interesting material for discussion and thought. America's ever growing army of masculine women and feminine men reflects a unique psychological problem.

Sexological literature cites many cases where certain homosexual men find rapt pleasure in "dolling up" in female dress and posing as the female of the species, while many male transvestites find their greatest satisfaction in looking at themselves in mirrors in the privacy of their homes and never give the matter of sex a thought. Transvestism, or Eonism as it is sometimes called, goes back to the dawn of the human race. There has been no civilization that has not known Transvestists in one way or another.

Here in the United States the Illinois Tribe of Indians seems to have been the originators of male Transvestism, as certain men in the tribe dressed like women and served to give sexual gratification to the other males of the tribe. (These Indians did not pretend to any sexual restraints, and they even, at times, according to the historian Charlevoix, displayed homosexual inclinations.)

"Escapism" is a psychological phenomenon. Nobody denies this. Many men and women who prefer a particular mode of dress are known as perfectly normal individuals so far as being useful citizens of their respective community is concerned; they may even adhere to a high moral code, be kind to their fellows, and be greatly concerned with the better things of life. One of the most confirmed Transvestists I have knowledge of is a prominent businessman and social leader, who uses neither liquor or tobacco, but who likes to rig himself out in female dress at every opportunity. He wears female silk "undies" and stockings even to his office.

Very few Transvestists of either sex ever land in a mental hospital, as they show no psychotic symptoms. However, the author is familiar with the case of a male Transvestist who was incarcerated in a State Hospital and purloined biscuits from the institution bakery where he was employed. He utilized these to simulate female breasts. Oddly, the doctors allowed him to wear a woman's
